

This is a partial list of men from the Mentone area who died or were killed during the Civil War. It was printed in the Tri-County Gazette, Thursday, May. 27, 1897 in connection with Memorial Day.

Charles Dewel, killed at Nashville, Tenn. He lived a few days after he was wounded. His leg was amputated and he never recovered from the shock.

William Raber, was very sick at Nashville. Washington Bybee went after him and brought him home and cared for him till he died. He only lived a short time, as his life was almost gone when he got home. He enlisted a strong healthy young man weighing 150 pounds. When he got home he was so emaciated he only weighed 80 pounds.

John Raber, brother of William, died at Nashville.

William Turner, died at Nashville.

Levi Bybee was killed at the battle of Chicamauga. He rests among the unknown dead - died doing his duty.

Adoniga Smart was killed at Chicamauga.

Newton Hoke was killed at battle of Resacka, Georgia.

Jesse Herron was killed on the skirmish line. He was brave almost to rashness.

David Wallace died at Gallatin, Tennessee.

Jacob Hartman died at Gallatin, Tennessee.

Thomas Hartman was killed at the battle of the wilderness of Virginia.

Andrew Messersmith died in the hospital at Gallatin, Tenn.

Henry Smith, a relative of the Mentzers, was killed in a charge near Nashville.

Nathaniel Albertson died at home while on furlough.

Samuel Winters was killed in some battle near Chattanooga, Tenn.

Thomas B. Hosking - lived till the war closed and the surgeons thought best to leave him in the hospital till he got strength enough to stand the trip home, but he died and his wife and two little boys never saw him. Only a small bundle of blue clothing was all they knew of him.

Levi Myers died on a boat on the way from New York to Washington City. The boat was crowded and he had to lie on the floor on a pile of coal. He was brought home and buried.

Charles Washam - was killed at the battle of Richmond, Ky. His company went into battle before some of them had drawn their guns. Washam was advised not to go with the company as he had no gun, but he went and was killed the first fire.

J. Beeson, was also killed at Richmond, Ky. He was a half brother of William Beeson.

Jacob Andrick - who was wounded at Chicamauga, died at Ringold, Georgia.
