CINNAMON HEART POPCORN

A delicious
Valentine's Day twist
on caramel popcorn

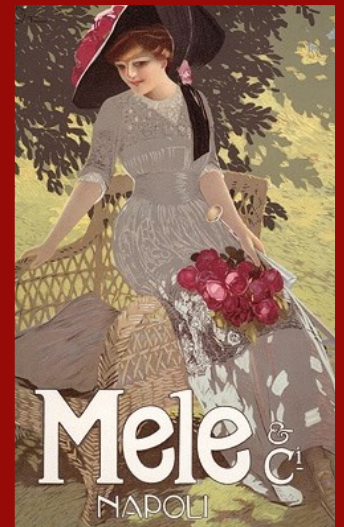

Ingredients

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/4 cup corn syrup
- 1 cup cinnamon hearts
- 8 cups popped popcorn (about 1/3 cup un-popped white popcorn kernels)

Instructions

1. Pop the popcorn and set it aside.
2. Preheat the oven to 250 degrees.
3. Cover baking sheets with parchment paper.
4. Combine the butter, corn syrup, and cinnamon hearts in a pot and cook it on medium-low heat until the cinnamon hearts melt and you end up with a smooth liquid syrup.
5. Cook for 5 minutes stirring constantly.
6. Pour the cinnamon heart syrup over the top of the popcorn. You can use a big bowl. Try to mix it around as best as you can. It gets very sticky, so just do your best. Yes, it is a sticky, gooey mess. It needs to bake in the oven in order to get a good texture
7. Spread it onto the cookie sheets. The hardest part is trying to spread it apart on the cookie sheet but if you end up with a big, sticky, glob of popcorn, once it bakes, it breaks apart really easily. Bake at 250 degrees for 30 minutes.

Abandoned Places!

Lynnwood Hall is a 110-room mansion in Elkins Park, Montgomery County, Pennsylvania. It was designed by architect Horace Trumbauer for industrialist Peter A.B. Widener, between 1897 and 1900.

Considered the largest surviving Gilded Age mansion in the Philadelphia area, it housed one of the most important private art collections of European masterpieces and decorative arts assembled by Widener and his younger son Joseph. Peter A.B. Widener died at Lynnwood Hall at the age of 80 in 1915. He was preceded in death by his eldest son and grandson, both of whom died when the Titanic sank in 1912. Built from Indiana limestone, the T-shaped Lynnwood Hall had 110 rooms and 55 bedrooms, in addition to a large art gallery, a ballroom, swimming pool, wine cellars, a farm and electrical power plant. Time magazine published an account of a lavish party held at Lynnwood Hall in 1932. Lynnwood suffered a general decline under the ownership of the Faith Theological Seminary, a religious group headed by Carl McIntire, which purchased it in 1952. During that ownership much interior detailing, such as mantels, walnut paneling, and landscape ornamentation was sold off in order to raise funds. Lynnwood Hall was added to the Preservation Alliance for the Greater Philadelphia's 2003 list for most endangered historic properties and is eligible for the National Register of Historic Places. The seminary and property was eventually foreclosed upon the second-mortgagee, a one-time follower of McIntire. Lynnwood Hall currently is owned by the First Korean Church of New York. However, it is not in use by that church and remains vacant. The First Korean Church twice requested a variance from the zoning rules and regulations of the Class R-2 Residence District and was denied, which resulted in a lawsuit that upheld Cheltenham Townships denial of the request. There have been negotiations ongoing of new ownership and possible renovations to the estate. Parties had hoped to have a plan finalized by the end of 2011. In 2012 the court ruled the First Korean Church of New York did not qualify for tax exemption. The property is currently on the market for $17,500,000 as of January 2015.
